'TRAGIC AND SHAMEFUL': Married father-of-three facing four years in prison

Teacher jailed for sexual assaults on child at school

Abused girl cried during questions

By Richard Duggan
and Sophie Finnegan observer@hertsessexnews.co.uk

A JUDGE has condemned a teacher from Dunmow for "tragically and shamefully" sexually assaulting a child.

Edward Ryan, 67, was charged with four counts of sexually assaulting a child under the age of 13 between September 15 and October 20, 2015.

At Chelmsford Crown Court last Monday, the jury found the defendant, Venmore Drive, Great Dunmow, guilty of all four charges and he was jailed for four years.

Rather than admitting his guilt at the outset, Ryan made his young victim, who cannot be named for legal reasons, go through the horror of giving evidence over video link.

She cried and clutched a cuddly toy as she answered questions relating to the string of attacks she was subjected to at a primary school in Harlow.

Community

Defending the sex offender, Sasha Bailey said: "He was a respected man within the community and within the education environment and had previously worked as a head governor at the Helena Romanes School in Great Dunmow.

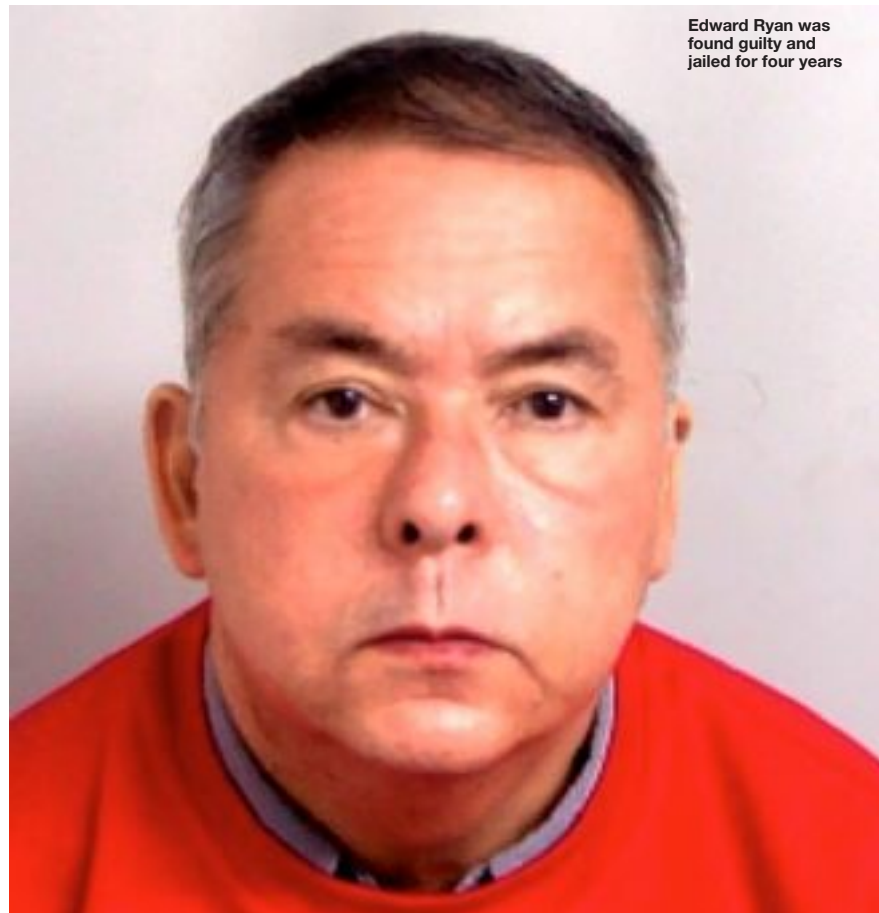

"Mr Ryan also worked as a PTA and raised a considerable amount for charities. He is a married man of 37 years, with three children and is a man of the church.

"These allegations meant that he wasn't able to teach or be in any environment where there are young children. He suffers from high blood pressure and has heart concerns.

"Prison is not designed to be a comfortable environment for everyone and Mr Ryan would find prison extremely difficult."

The paedophile's family, who supported him throughout the trial, sobbed as the jury read out the guilty verdicts.

Judge David Turner QC said: "Without question you were a talented and contented maths teacher up until your retirement in 2012, where you took on part-time teaching at a primary school.

Edward Ryan was found guilty and jailed for four years

"You tragically and shamefully, and for reasons that remain unclear, crossed that boundary in autumn 2015 and sexually assaulted a young girl.

"In a small office, you groomed her by giving her hugs during lessons and encouraged her to sit on your lap as she did her work where you touched her. She was scared and confused and wished that it would stop or someone would interrupt it.

"For a teacher, to abuse your position in lessons, in a school office, with a young child who trusted you is unacceptable and gross abuse of your professionalism."

Ryan was also handed a Sexual Harm Prevention Order which will be in place for five years. He will also be on the Sex Offenders Register until his dying day.

THE girl abused by teacher Edward Ryan cried as she gave evidence in court.

Representing Ryan, Sasha Bailey asked: "In that interview you say that one of your teachers had seen you sat on Mr Ryan's knee, maybe three times?"

"Yes," the girl replied.

Asked if she had ever hugged any teachers while at school, the girl confirmed that she had and listed several of them.

But when asked if she had ever sat on any of the other teachers' knees, the reply was "No."

Delving further into the alleged incidents, Ms Bailey asked: "You explained to the police officer that when you sat on his knee that he would touch you?"

The girl confirmed this was what she had said.

Shortly after this line of questioning the girl was seen to be tearful as she clutched a stuffed toy, but said she was fine to continue answering questions.

Ms Bailey then asked whether she had told any friends about what she said had happened and she confirmed that she had.

"Did you think about telling a teacher?" she asked. The girl was unable to remember.

"You don't tell a teacher, you don't tell mummy or daddy when it happened first of all," said Ms Bailey. "But you did tell two friends?"

The girl replied that she did before sobbing.

WHAT THE NSPCC SAYS

A LEADING children's protection charity has slammed paedophile teacher Edward Ryan who abused one of his pupils during lessons.

In a statement released shortly after the hearing, an NSPCC spokesperson for the East of England said: "As a teacher Ryan should have been protecting children.

"Instead, he exploited his position of trust to sickeningly abuse a young girl in his care. He cruelly made his victim relive his depraved crimes in court rather than admit his guilt and it is her tremendous courage that has helped put him behind bars.

"It's vital that young people know how to recognise abuse and feel empowered to report it, which is why the NSPCC spoke to more than 51,000 primary school pupils across Essex over the last academic year as part of its Speak Out Stay Safe Service."

Still waiting for answers 16 years after son's death at Michael Barrymore's mansion

Dad's hopes for a second inquest into son's death

By William Mata

william.mata@hertssexnews.co.uk

TERRY Lubbock said his chances of getting a second inquest for his son's death hang in the balance.

The Harlow pensioner is hoping authorities will again review the death of his son Stuart Lubbock, who was found dead by authorities in the grounds of Michael Barrymore's Roydon mansion in March 2001.

Despite reports Stuart, 31, had been sexually assaulted before his death, the truth has never been unveiled and a police investigation continues after a coroner recorded an open verdict in 2002.

Stuart Lubbock from Harlow was found dead in 2001

Former TV star Mr Barrymore can now pursue his attempt to sue Essex Police for a reported £2 million over his linked arrest alongside two others in 2007, which the former Strike It Lucky host claims damaged his career.

Terry Lubbock, who lives in Partridge Road Care Home in Harlow, submitted paperwork to a London attorney in June for a second inquest and hopes Mr Barrymore's exposure could help his appeal.

He said this week: "My son was raped before he was killed.

There was an open verdict to the inquest, but how can they do that?

"It is a no-no verdict.

I think (the chances of the inquest happening) are in the middle now."

"I do not know when that will come.

"We are still getting stuff back from the police.

"They have not said no."

Correspondence shows Essex Police are in talks with Mr Lubbock's legal representative Anthony Bennett.

Evidence

In a letter to chief constable Stephen Kavanagh, Mr Bennett states the open verdict was not satisfactory given there is "strong evidence," to suggest father-of-two Stuart was murdered.

The Attorney General will decide on whether there should be a second inquest.

Mr Barrymore, 65, meanwhile, is touted to be on the trail of a comeback. Mr Lubbock, 72, continued: "I was dumbfounded (by last month's decision of the High Court to allow Mr Barrymore to seek damages against police).

"I think he has got some very good friends. There is still a big question mark about what happened to my son."

He added: "I just want this to keep on running.

"I think a second inquest should be all about the injuries, I do think that should come out."

Developer slammed over latest Gilston consultation 'charade'

Residents say they remain in the dark over green belt 10,000-home vision

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsessexnews.co.uk

A DEVELOPER'S latest public consultation for the controversial 10,000-home Gilston Park Estate has been blasted as a "charade".

Places for People held a meeting last Friday in Harlow and on Saturday in High Wycombe to inform residents about their proposal.

While some details of the event had been advertised in the Harlow Star, a full press statement on the consultation was only sent out on Wednesday – minutes before the deadline of the Herts and Essex Observer, meaning it could not be printed.

Ridiculous

Spike Hughes, leader of campaign group Stop Harlow North, said: "It was all last minute, these things always arrive at short notice. It is getting ridiculous."

"Places for People doing a public consultation is a complete charade."

"The Concept Framework Document, subject of the recent public consultation, was prepared with zero public participation 18 months ago."

"Despite last year's consultation not a single word of it has change their decisions. They are going through the motions."

Earlier this year the project was given Government backing with then-housing minister Gavin Barwell stating it could be one of three garden towns to be built.

Places for People has been contacted for a response, but nothing has been received at time of going to press.

A development has been mooted for the area for several years and was previously called Harlow North.

Consultation

Last week, a statement quoted group director Mary Parsons as saying: "Over September we will be consulting on our outline planning application for the Gilston area. We would like to invite members of the public to attend our consultation events and have their say on how the development should evolve."

Places for People could submit the planning application for Gilston Park Estate next year.

The meeting Mr Hughes alluded to is likely to take place next year with the planning inspector to make a final decision.

structure supporting it. We still have not seen any plans."

In a press statement last week Places for People cited a £600 million figure to support transport and community infrastructure.

Mr Hughes said he felt it had not been adequately explained where the money is coming from.

He also complained that the answers the developer had provided to questions had been contradictory and that images used in their publicity showed a landscape that was already out of date.

"The next move is that we hope to be involved in the public examination," he continued.

"It is a charade. They never

'Superstorm' scare as stormy weather heads in on jet stream

ESSEX is set to be battered by a powerful 'superstorm' as the remnants of Hurricanes Maria and Jose, which wreaked havoc in the Caribbean, head directly towards the region.

The devastating hurricanes could merge as they pass over the Atlantic causing a wave of stormy weather to sweep across Northern Europe and Britain.

Leon Brown, chief forecaster of The Weather Channel, said Maria is expected to swing north-eastwards during midweek, while Jose, which has been stationary in the Atlantic for some days, will start to move north past Newfoundland.

Weather forecasters believe the potent storm could begin to develop on Friday close to the east coast of the USA and eastern Canada when a large ridge of high pressure develops pulling the two systems closer.

After combining together, the dangerous duo of stormy weather could be picked up by the jet stream and steered out into the Atlantic and straight into Britain.

The superstorm could see Essex lashed with heavy gales and thunderstorms.

Weather-watchers are keeping a close eye on the hurricanes to help them predict just how much and how hard Britain will be hit with the storm.

Forecaster Mr Brown added: "I would emphasise that this is one possibility and it will very much depend on the speed and track of Maria in the coming days."

Council contests parent action group's claims over travel for 11 to 16-year-olds

'Increase in cost of school transport'

By Hannah Kane
star@hertsexnews.co.uk

SCHOOL transport in Essex could be costing taxpayers an extra 15 per cent than expected for pupils, a parent action group has claimed.

A Freedom of Information request submitted by Essex Against School Transport Cuts (EASTC) claims that the cost of school transport for 11 to 16-year-olds rose compared with 2014.

Reduction

This comes after a 2014 policy by Essex County Council that proposed a reduction to costs.

School transport for all pupils under the policy was meant to cost nearly £4 million less, but the parent action group claims this has fallen short with just under £40,000 of savings.

When combined with the abolition of transport for 16 to 18 year-olds, it leaves a real-term increase in the cost of getting your child to school.

James Bridges and Scott Wilson, from EASTC, said: "It is a clear misuse of taxpayer funds for the council to persist with a policy delivering no savings, which is creating thousands of extra rush hour car journeys, detrimentally impacting on the health and well-being of all of us as well as costing working families in villages all over Essex.

"As parents we have repeatedly raised this issue with our county council representatives but they haven't been interested in helping us to reform the policy.

Essex Against School Transport Cuts claims 11-16 year old transport is now costing £1,061 per pupil, compared to £790 in 2014

"We now again ask the council to reconsider and work with parents like ourselves to find a new solution that works for both parents and tax payers."

Since the policy took effect, the action group claims the annual total cost of school transport has reduced by just £40,327 or 0.2 per cent, from a £25 million budget.

This is £3,726,000 less than the council predicted when it introduced the policy in 2014.

When it is considered that there were 5,000 fewer children transported by free bus in the same period, the figures show an increase for 11-16 year old transport, when calculated per pupil, of £271, or £760,000 net.

Adjusted for decreasing pupil numbers, 11-16 year old transport is now costing £1,061 per pupil, compared to £790 per pupil in 2014.

However, Essex County Council says the claims by EASTC are misleading, as more than £40,000 has been saved by the policy.

Councillor Ray Gooding, Essex County Council cabinet member for education, said: "It is important we provide the best possible value for money for the people of Essex.

"There can be no justification for a special deal for some locations based on 'catchment areas', paid for by all other Essex taxpayers.

"The press release from Essex Against School Transport cuts is extremely misleading.

"We have reduced the cost by more than £1.4 million since 2011/12 and the policy change savings are fully on track.

"The change to the education transport policy, which came into effect from September 2015, was made to ensure there is a consistent and equitable system for school transport across the whole county, as opposed to treating some areas more favourably than others.

"There is no intention to review or change the policy."

Caravans convoy is moved on by police

A CARAVAN convoy that pitched up on Third Avenue was moved on by Harlow Council and Essex Police.

Officers attended land off the Harlow road last Thursday morning where they found three caravans and vehicles.

They had arrived at about 3pm the previous day.

Harlow Council has an injunction to prevent named individuals setting up illegal encampments on various strips of land across the town.

Deterrent

While the people involved were not named on the bill, which has recently been renewed, land off Third Avenue – in fact right in front of the council offices – was unsurprisingly listed.

A spokesman from the local authority said: "The injunction has once again proved to be a deterrent that quickly resolves any issues on the land it covers and usually within 24 hours.

"The injunction is about upholding the law, responding and listening to the concerns of residents and businesses, and protecting the town's green open spaces and business areas.

"It is not, and never has been, about persecuting any particular group of people or their way of life."

Charities say challenge to get funds is getting tough

Rising demand for services and increasing costs straining coffers

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsessexnews.co.uk

HARLOW charities are facing funding anxieties as rising demands and costs are creating a challenge for them to keep going.

Managers from town services Harlow Foodbank, Upwards with Downs and Mind in West Essex have all spoken about their battle to survive in a tough climate.

Alison Wilson, chief executive of mental health charity Mind in West Essex, based in Bush Fair, said public engagement and clear communication is important.

She said: "As a charity the biggest issue we face is the difficulty of generating income, particularly to support running costs."

"A related difficult issue is that we are regularly approached by people who want a service from us but who we have no funding to help."

"This is particularly the case with counselling."

"We do not have a funded service and we are only able to offer a service to someone if they are able to pay."

"This is a situation that is difficult both for the person who has taken the step of calling in and the member of staff they are speaking to."

Confusion

Another problem is residents not knowing Mind in West Essex is not the same as national Mind, and confusion over what the service offers.

Ms Wilson added: "One thing that helps us to be as effective as possible is getting as many of the public as possible to engage with us."

"It is vital to us that we develop services and support in a way that genuinely responds to the needs of the population."

Cristina Griffiths, founder of Upwards with Downs, a Parnall Road-based charity which helps families support children with Down syndrome, also feels funding is their biggest worry.

She said: "Running a charity is extremely hard as we try to help as many people as we can."

"As we grow year on year funds become more difficult to raise."

"As we are run by mothers we did not have any experience in running a charity, yet we work hard to ensure we

Upwards With Downs is among the charities in Harlow which has spoken of funding worries raise funds.

"This is either by events or grants so we can continue offering services such as speech therapy and swimming to improve muscle tone."

"My worry is that if funds are not available we will need to ask parents for financial help to continue."

Advantage

"As we grow we are recognised and this helps secure funding. I believe support from the Government better would be a great advantage."

Gary Knott of Michael Roberts Charitable Trust, the charity which operates

Harlow Foodbank, said: "I think for most charities the biggest issue is funding and supporting the work."

"What we are finding is the needs are increasing but the funding is diminishing."

"It can be quite a challenge. We find that as a trust we can bring in just about enough to cover what we want to do."

"Last year was difficult. We ended up in surplus."

"The needs are increasing and it was a difficult year, even with people giving donations."

"We bring in enough to see us through and last year was a one off."

Spurs top town's pick of football favourites

TOTTENHAM Hotspur is the best supported football team in Harlow according to internet research.

More searches on Google for Spurs have been made on computers in Harlow than for any other club in the past year.

While Arsenal are the most followed London team online in the heart of the capital, Tottenham have the region north of the M25 almost sewn up.

Redeveloped

After finishing second in the Premier League last season, Spurs' form has dropped this campaign with the club playing home games at Wembley stadium while their White Hart Lane ground is redeveloped.

There are pockets of the region that go for other teams though.

The south west of Greater London appears to be very much a Chelsea heartland.

Crystal Palace are favoured in the south-central region around West Wickham and New Addington.

Harlow has a Spurs Shop in the Harvey Centre which is currently selling the new Nike branded kit.

Nobody in the shop was able to comment.

'I'm not an Islamaphobe'

Election hopeful denies tweets mean he is prejudiced against religion

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsessexnews.co.uk

A CONSERVATIVE Harlow by-election candidate has denied being an Islamaphobe after a series of contested tweets.

In May Peter Lamb tweeted: "Islam is like alcoholism. The first step to recovery is to admit you have a problem."

Next Thursday, he will attempt to win the Toddbrook Harlow Council seat after a heated campaign in which Labour's candidate has also been criticised.

Labour supporters have brought Mr Lamb's tweets on Islam to prominence as their own candidate Tony Edwards hopes to win.

The first of these from November 2015 read: "Turkey buys oil from ISIS. Muslims sticking together."

Another from August 2016 read: "The Jewish community do not seek to push their views on the wider community unlike the Muslims."

But this week Mr Lamb told the Harlow Star he sticks by his comments and that he is not prejudiced against Islam.

He said: "I have no issue with anybody's race, colour, faith or football team. I have a problem with terrorism and that's a view shared."

Concern

"There is real concern about terrorism from members of the public."

Mr Lamb added that he had "no regrets" about the tweets and that the issue is not likely to shape the outcome of the election.

Labour is hoping to defend the seat after Rod Truan, one of three ward councillors, announced he is leaving the town to take a position in Cornwall.

Mr Edwards has been slammed by Conservatives after disrupting a pre-general election hustings in May inside St Paul's Church.

Mr Lamb said: "It's a real shame that Labour are backing a candidate that has so little regard for the chairmanship of a public meeting."

Councillor Andrew Johnson, leader of the opposition Harlow

Conservative group, said: "That sort of disgusting misbehaviour is not what anyone wants to see of their elected officials."

"Mr Edwards needs to pledge that if he is elected he will respect the authority of the chairman and not disrespect the chamber."

Mr Edwards has been approached for a response.

The Green Party has announced James Aicken as their candidate, while former Lib Dem councillor Lesley Rideout will again stand and Patsy Long has put herself forward for Ukip.

Peter Lamb claimed: "Islam is like alcoholism"

TIME TO TRANSFORM EYE HEALTH

The Royal National Institute of Blind People (RNIB) and Specsavers are urging people to have regular eye tests to help maintain and protect their sight.

Research* commissioned by the charity and high street opticians has revealed that one in five people will live with sight loss in their lifetime, despite at least half of all cases being avoidable. With nearly six million people in the UK currently living with sight-threatening conditions, nearly every family in Britain is touched by sight problems in some way.

While sight is the nation's most precious sense by far, with 78% of people polled saying it is the one they would least like to lose, a quarter of UK adults are still risking avoidable sight loss by not having had an eye test in the past 2 years.

Of those who had not been for an eye test during that time period, 33% did not think that there was anything wrong with their eyes, while 24% said that they just didn't have the time.

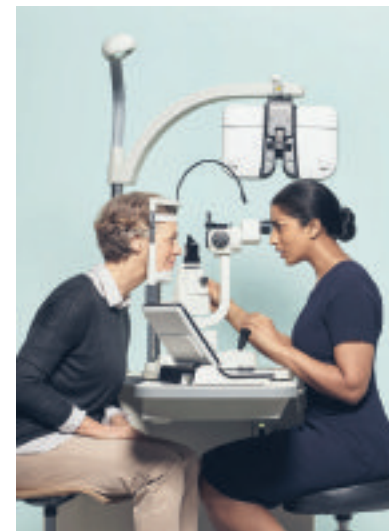

Specsavers believes that eye care should be accessible to everyone. Specsavers Healthcall offers a free NHS sight test at home and a comprehensive home eye care service to those who cannot visit a store unaccompanied.

As with all Specsavers staff, the home visiting teams are becoming Dementia Friends to help people with dementia recognise sight loss. The research reveals that only one in three people who qualify for a home visit are aware of the service. It is vital that, in an ageing society, we meet the needs of these vulnerable people and increase awareness.

Specsavers' clinical spokesperson Dr Nigel Best said: 'Some people are waiting until they experience sight loss before booking an eye test, which means they are potentially preventing their optician from detecting signs of eye health problems or other medical issues at an early stage. Early intervention is vital in the management and successful treatment of many conditions.'

RNIB acting CEO Sally Harvey added: 'We would encourage anyone who has put off going for an eye test to book one at the earliest opportunity.'

* YouGov Survey commissioned by Specsavers and RNIB 23rd June - 7th July 2017 of 6,430 UK adults aged 18+.

Wheelie stunt antics land motorway biker in prison

Eight-month jail sentence for 27-year-old daredevil rider

By Tom Bage

star@hertsessexnews.co.uk

A MOTORCYCLIST who performed wheelies and took selfies while riding on the motorway has been jailed for eight months.

Pawel Zietowski, aged 27, from Harlow, was sentenced at Stoke-on-Trent Crown Court on Monday.

During the hearing the court was shown footage of his antics as he rode his motorbike on the M6 northbound, near Staffordshire, on the afternoon of June 3.

He was seen doing wheelies, taking a selfie and ultimately riding his Yamaha R6 in a dangerous manner.

He was also travelling above the speed limit at times.

Zietowski was pulled over at Yarnfield, between junctions 14 and 15, by an officer from the Central Motorway Police Group (CMPG).

Inspector Sion Hathway, from CMPG, said: "Such dangerous riding will not be tolerated on our roads."

"Zietowski showed a blatant disregard for the rules of the road, and fellow motorists."

"His antics could have easily

Pawel Zietowski pulling stunts on his bike on the M6 resulted in tragedy."

Zietowski was initially summoned to appear at North Staffordshire Justice Centre on Tuesday August 8, where he pleaded guilty to driving a motor vehicle dangerously.

The charges of speeding

(exceeding 70mph motorway limit) and using a handheld mobile phone/device while driving a motor vehicle on a road were withdrawn.

Zietowski was sentenced to eight months in prison and given a 28-month driving ban.

Guests at the studio's opening

Spotlight on new film studio opening

A FILM and photographic studio complex is now open for business, providing a first of its kind facility near Harlow.

Matching Tye Studios was officially opened last weekend by Harlow MP Robert Halfon, with guests inspecting the impressive selection of sets and facilities on offer.

Fitness experts Angela Knox and Mark Nicoll founded the complex in Housham Hall, Matching Tye, after finding a lack of suitable facilities to film content for their healthy living website.

As well as using it for their own benefit, the pair have opened up the studios to the community to hire for film and photography projects.

Facilities include 1,350sq ft of studio space, three different sets, a green screen, a kitchen and sports facilities.

There is also a top-end selection of lighting and camera equipment.

Heartbreak as abandoned pony loses survival battle

‘Vets did all they could but Raggy was just too ill to pull through’

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsessexnews.co.uk

A PONY has died a few weeks after being discovered abandoned on the site of an old Harlow school.

Raggy, as the female piebald cob was known, was found underweight and in severe pain from foot condition laminitis – possibly having just lost a foal.

Redwings Horse Sanctuary announced the tragic latest development last week in what has been labelled Harlow's equine crisis.

Severity

Jo Franklin, senior welfare officer at Roydon-based Redwings, said: “Due to the severity of her condition, the outlook for poor Raggy was very uncertain from the start but we were determined not to give up on her.”

“The vets did everything they could to give her the best chance of pulling through, but sadly she was just too ill.

“Raggy's condition took a turn for the worst on Wednesday when even simply standing up became too much for her and it was decided that the kindest thing to do would be to put her to sleep.”

Raggy the pony died after being found abandoned

Redwings staff have spoken out about horse tethering in the past.

Raggy's story follows the circulation of a graphic image of another deceased mare, which was shared on social media and prompted Harlow MP Robert Half-on to demand action.

Samantha Garvey, RSPCA chief inspector, added: “We are so sad poor Raggy lost her fight for life.”

“The RSPCA had worked with Redwings to give her the best chance we could of survival.

“Sadly, Raggy was just another example of an irresponsible owner abandoning their sick or injured horse to die alone and leaving someone else to deal with it.

“We still want to find the person responsible for dumping Raggy, and as we believe Raggy recently had a foal, we desperately want to know how the foal is doing as we are concerned for their welfare.

Anyone who can provide any information about Raggy is urged to call Redwings' welfare team on 01508 481008 or email welfare@redwings.co.uk

Alternatively, you can call the RSPCA on 0300 1234 999.

Man in a ‘serious condition’ after crash

A PERSON was reportedly trapped under a vehicle after a lorry collided with a cyclist on Edinburgh Way in Harlow.

Essex Police advised motorists to avoid the A414 passage after the incident, which happened around 1.39pm yesterday (Wednesday).

A spokesman from East of England Ambulance Service (EEAST) said: “We were called to reports of a road traffic collision involving a cyclist and a lorry.”

“An ambulance crew, two rapid response vehicles, our Hazardous Area Response Team (HART), an ambulance officer and an air ambulance from Essex and Herts Air Ambulance Trust (EHAAT) were dispatched to reports that someone was trapped underneath the vehicle.”

Essex Police are appealing for anyone with car dashboard camera footage of the incident to get in touch.

A spokesman said: “Police received reports that a lorry and cyclist had been in collision.

“Any witnesses who have any dash cam footage who haven't made themselves known to officers at the scene, are asked to call Essex police on 101.”

A spokesman for EHAAT later confirmed a man had been airlifted to The Royal London Hospital in a “serious condition” with injuries to his head, chest and leg.

Andrew Watt died after the incident outside the Poplar Kitten

Two men are released under investigation after fatal fight

TWO men arrested on suspicion of GBH after a fatal brawl outside a Harlow pub have been released under investigation.

The men, aged 23 and 26, were released on bail following the incident at the Poplar Kitten, Tawneys Road, just after 10.40pm on August 17.

A 48-year-old man from Harlow, Andrew Watt, suffered a head injury after a fight broke out and was airlifted to Addenbrooke's Hospital in Cambridge where he died two days later.

His wife has previously spoken publicly after the loss of her husband.

She said: "Tragically my best friend and gorgeous husband was taken away from me.

"We had only been married for eight weeks. Our wedding day was the most amazing day of our lives. He was the love of my life.

"Andy was the most infectious person I have ever known.

"He was loving, caring, funny, and a fantastic friend, brother, nephew and son. His friends and family are devastated, as am I, and we are going to miss him dearly.

Popular

"He was a popular figure who was loved by all. But most of all of he was my husband, who I miss more than words can ever say.

"I am absolutely heartbroken." Enquiries in to the incident are continuing.

Tessa Harvey explains about dementia in her video

'Passionate about spreading awareness of dementia'

By William Mata

william.mata@hertssexnews.co.uk

A HARLOW woman's Facebook video explaining what dementia is has been seen 14,000 times.

Tessa Harvey, 41, of Willow Close, posted the five minute film on Thursday September 14 and never expected anyone apart from her friends to see it.

She said: "I just shared it on my own Facebook. I was nervous as I have not done a video before and I do not know how it has got this big."

As a group coordinator for the Harlow branch of Alzheimer's Society, based in the Latton Bush Centre, in Southern Way, she organises various activity groups for people with the illness.

In the video she explains how dementia might affect people and how residents should not give up on relatives with dementia even if they get forgetful.

Passionate

"I am passionate about spreading awareness of dementia," she continued.

"A lot of people do not understand it. I saw a husband and wife with dementia get onto a bus and the driver could be really short with the husband because he was not able to go quickly."

Aimee Packwood, Alzheimer's Society Dementia Friends officer, said that Ms Harvey's video is a snapshot of the charity's Dementia Friends Information Session.

She said: "The bookcase descriptions she refers to are examples within the session to help engage participants in a way that they can try and relate to.

"A Dementia Friends Information Session is a fun, interactive way to learn a little about dementia and how it can affect people's lives."

Harlow firm markets goods at arms fair attended by a 'roll call of dictatorships'

Flak flies after firm exhibits weapons to rogue regimes

By Harriet Clugston

harriet.clugston@hertsessexnews.co.uk

A HARLOW-BASED weapons manufacturer was among hundreds of companies that marketed products to delegates from human rights-abusing nations.

Raytheon, whose bombs have been sold to Saudi Arabia and dropped in Yemen, was one of several Essex companies among the 1,500 exhibiting goods to potential buyers at the biannual Defence and Security Equipment International (DSEI) fair, which took place at London's ExCel Centre last week.

Another Essex weapons manufacturer at the fair was BAE Systems, which conducts research and development at a site in Chelmsford. Its products have been used by Saudi Arabia "to devastating effect" in Yemen.

Government and military delegates from 56 countries, including Saudi Arabia, Pakistan, Turkey and Bahrain, were invited to attend DSEI, which was co-hosted by the Defence and Security Organisation, the section of the Government's Department for International Trade tasked with assisting weapons manufacturers with international exports.

Protesters make their point outside the London arms fair

Six of the countries invited to DSEI, including Saudi Arabia, have been included on the UK Government's own watch list of human rights abusers, while nine are considered to have authoritarian regimes.

Andrew Smith of Campaign Against the Arms Trade (CAAT) described the guest list as a "roll call of despots, dictatorships and human rights abusers".

He added: "They will be greeted by civil servants and Government ministers who are there for one reason only: to promote weapons."

"It's impossible to promote human rights and democracy while arming and supporting authoritarian regimes and tyrants."

Another company exhibiting at DSEI was Basildon's Leonardo, formerly Finmeccanica, whose T129 attack helicopters have been used against Kurdish rebels in Turkey.

Hundreds of British Kurds gathered outside the ExCel Centre ahead of DSEI in protest at the British Government's continued support of arms exports to Turkey, arguing that British weapons sold at the fair would be used against Kurds in Turkey and Syria.

BAE, the world's third largest arms producer, supplies weapons including aircraft, warships, tanks and artillery to customers in more than 100 countries.

Its Eurofighter Typhoon combat aircraft have played "a central role in Saudi Arabia's attacks in Yemen", according to CAAT.

The conflict in Yemen has left three million people malnourished — including half a million children described by Oxfam as being in a "life-threatening condition" — and 20 million, or 75 per cent of the population, in need of humanitarian aid.

Appalling

According to a recent report by the United Nations (UN), more than 60 per cent of the more than 10,000 civilian deaths in the war-ravaged country have been the result of Saudi-led air strikes, which began in March 2015, with Amnesty International accusing them of displaying an "appalling disregard for civilian lives".

The UK has sold more than £3.6 billion-worth of arms to Saudi Arabia — its biggest customer — since the devastating conflict began, according to campaign group Control Arms.

Andrew Smith said: "The war in Yemen may feel far away and removed, but there are companies on our doorsteps that have profited from the destruction every step of the way."

"Companies like BAE and Raytheon have not just fuelled the bombardment, they have aided and facilitated it."

In July, a High Court ruled that arms exports could continue to Saudi Arabia after a legal challenge led by CAAT, despite mounting humanitarian concerns.

The UK Government had previously been revealed to be considering suspending sales to Saudi Arabia following the 2016 bombing of a funeral in Yemen which killed 140 civilians.

Neither BAE nor Raytheon responded to a request for comment.

Callum tackles monster run in memory of his beloved uncle

A HARLOW man is set to run the Loch Ness Marathon to raise funds for St Clare Hospice.

Callum Hynd, 33, will compete in memory of John Hobbs, his beloved uncle who died in March.

Mr Hobbs received care at the Hastingwood-based hospice.

Mr Hynd will run the 26.2 mile distance this weekend across challenging terrain and gradient, but is determined to finish for a charity close to his heart.

"After taking up running a few years ago, I decided to do some challenges every year," he said.

"I completed my first marathon last year and was pleased to raise over £750 for another charity.

"This year, after sadly losing John, it was a no-brainer that I had to do something for St Clare after the invaluable care and continued support for the family."

St Clare provides specialist palliative and end-of-life care. The charity relies on donations to meet running costs of £4 million a year to run.

Mr Hynd added: "St Clare

Hospice was so supportive of John and the family.

"I just want to take this opportunity to give a little back to the charity, and help to raise awareness of the excellent work they do – day in and day out.

"I'm feeling very excited and confident about the race and after six months of training I can't believe it's finally here. Every step for our uncle John will be an honour."

Greater Anglia staff are to go on strike next month

Commuters to face disruption on trains and Underground

Strike action is announced for October

By Hannah Kane
star@hertsexnews.co.uk

STRIKE action on both Greater Anglia and the London Underground is set to cause chaos for Essex commuters travelling into and around the capital.

Rail union RMT announced that on Tuesday, October 3, and Thursday, October 5, strikes on Greater Anglia services will go ahead over the potential extension of the 'driver-only operation', which they believe is a clear threat to passenger safety.

And if that wasn't enough, tube union Aslef announced its drivers will stage a 24-hour walkout on October 5.

It says that Transport for London has failed to implement a programme that would allow drivers to work four-day weeks and work fewer weekends.

Although it is unclear which specific lines will be affected, it is likely that London Liverpool Street, a station that connects Essex commuters into the city, will be impacted.

When?

The Greater Anglia strikes will take place on Tuesday, October 3, and Thursday, October 5.

Members are set to strike between 12.01am and 11.59pm.

As for London Underground workers, they are striking on October 5 for a full 24-hour period.

Why?

The Abellio network are staging the walkout to protest at a lack of job security after the rise in the number of driverless trains being used on the service.

RMT General Secretary Mick Cash said: "Greater Anglia have been given every opportunity to give a guarantee on the future of the guard on their services.

"They have failed to do so and that left us with no alternative but to move to a ballot in the interests of rail safety."

The drivers' vote was two to one for strike action on a 75 per cent turnout.

Ignored

Mr Cash said: "Our members voted by massive majorities for action but the company have ignored that and have failed to seize the opportunity to give us the very simple assurances on the future of the guards, and the guarantee of a second safety critical member of staff on current services.

"That failure leaves us no option but to move to strike action."

"The union remains available for further talks around the crucial issue of the guard guarantee."

Aslef members voted by an 88 per cent margin to take strike action in their dispute over the failure on commitments made by London Underground in 2015 to improve work and life balance.

Tube workers are campaigning for fairer working hours and more weekends off.

Finn Brennan, Aslef's organiser on London Underground, said: "Our members' patience has finally been exhausted and our executive committee has announced strike action."

"As always, we are ready to meet at any time to try to find a solution, but it is long past time that LU management started to act to resolve this long running dispute."

How can I avoid it?

Greater Anglia bosses have yet to announce how they will help with the strain of the strike. However they have reassured passengers that a contingency plan will be put in place.

After the announcement on Tuesday, Richard Dean, Train Service Delivery Director of Greater Anglia said: "We are obviously disappointed with the announcement."

"We're keen to talk to the RMT to try and resolve the issues involved and to avert industrial action."

"In the event of industrial action going ahead on Tuesday, October 3, and Thursday, October 5, we'd like to reassure customers that we have contingency plans in place and intend to run a full service."

"We value you our conductors highly and we have guaranteed their jobs until the end of the franchise in October 2025."

"In fact, we will be recruiting additional conductors, as we are replacing all of our trains with brand new trains from 2019, which will enable us to run more services."

Adrian is excited to take up his new post at the Local Enterprise Partnership

Man who has helped secure deals worth millions for Herts given greater role

ADRIAN Hawkins, the chairman of Weldability-Sif, Letchworth Garden City, has been appointed as the new deputy chairman of Hertfordshire Local Enterprise Partnership (LEP).

The decision to appoint Adrian, who already sits on the LEP board and is chairman of its Skills and Employment Board, as deputy chairman was ratified at the last LEP board meeting on June 29 and is now in effect.

Adrian joined the LEP board in 2014 and has taken over from Peter O'Gorman, regional director of Santander Business Banking.

Strength

Mark Bretton, chairman of Hertfordshire LEP, said: "Peter has worked tirelessly in pursuit of economic growth for the county. During his five-year term the LEP has gone from strength to strength, securing millions of pounds of investment for the county. Peter has provided wise counsel on numerous occasions and his attention to detail and level of scrutiny has been invaluable.

"The LEP board's decision to appoint Adrian as Peter's successor was unanimous, and is testament to the contribution Adrian has made over the past three years.

"I know that Adrian shares my passion for the training and development of young people and I look forward to us working more closely together to ensure that everyone regardless of their socio-economic background can contribute to society and their local economy."

Peter O'Gorman said: "I am sure that under Adrian's leadership, the LEP will continue to make a difference in the business community and I wish everyone at Hertfordshire LEP the best of success for the future."

Adrian Hawkins said: "Peter O'Gorman has served the LEP well since its inception and he will be a tough act to follow. I am delighted with my appointment as deputy chair of Hertfordshire LEP and fully appreciate the confidence my fellow board members have shown in me. I am looking forward to closely supporting both Mark Bretton and the LEP team, as our organisation delivers some key responsibilities from the Government to help drive forward Hertfordshire's economy and industrial strategy."

The 118-year-old furniture retailer was chosen as the winner as voted for by AIS's

The managing director at Fishpools, Simon Fishpool, said: "It's great to be recognised for this award.

"As an independent retailer, we always try to offer more for both our customers and suppliers, so to know these efforts are making a difference is fantastic."

Fishpools was established in 1899 and is now being run by the fourth generation of Fishpools, and is the South East's largest quality furniture store.

Rules are needed to stop poaching

THE power of contractual restrictions preventing former employees from wreaking havoc with customers and sensitive commercial information is often underestimated.

Some clients say to me that they did not think that such restrictions could be enforced. Others assume that they can "cut and paste" restrictions from elsewhere or that general wording can do the trick.

At the risk of sounding like a lawyer trying to drum up business, I need to stress the importance of properly drafted restrictions. The courts will only enforce restrictions if they are reasonable and no more extensive than is needed to protect genuine business interests; they are not permitted to stifle competitive activity.

Useful restrictions include those preventing poaching of customers and colleagues. The anti-customer poaching restrictions can prevent approaching customers and also dealing with them. The other important restriction in relation to high-level employees prevents them from working for a competitive business or setting up in competition. These are in addition to restrictions preventing the misuse of confidential information for the benefit of a competitive business.

The most common pitfalls against enforceability are as follows:

■ The restrictions are for too long a period which cannot be justified in terms of business protection, e.g. they allow too much time for the employer to business has no dealings in Scotland then a UK-wide restriction is unlikely to work.

■ Periods of restriction are often in addition to garden leave periods with the result that the cumulative period is excessive, any period of garden leave needs to be subtracted;

■ The drafting does not distinguish between senior and junior employees; non-competition (rather than customer "non-poaching") restrictions are generally unenforceable against junior employees and the time periods and geographic ambit of restrictions should also take into account seniority;

■ The enforceability/reasonableness of restrictions is assessed at the time they were agreed and not when they are enforced. So, if restrictions are excessive and unenforceable because an employee was too junior at the time the restrictions are agreed, it does not matter that the restrictions are appropriate when the employer seeks to enforce them because by that time the employee has been promoted; they will still be unenforceable.

In conclusion, neglecting to think about and tailor restrictions to your business and the employees concerned can be the difference between enforceability and serious damage to your commercial interests.

■ For specific advice on employment law issues, please call Richard Gvero at Longmores Solicitors on 01992 300333.

Richard Gvero gives his advice on contractual restrictions recruit a replacement employee and to re-cement relations with that customer;

■ Restrictions often prevent outgoing employees soliciting or dealing with customers with whom they have had no previous contact. This is generally unenforceable because the restrictions are designed to protect against the employee making use of business relationships developed during their employment;

■ The area of restriction in relation to non-competition restrictions is too wide and reaches areas where the employer does not operate. It is therefore important to think about where the customer base and competitors are located when deciding upon the ambit of a restriction. For example, if a

Estate agent not surprised by the inclusion of counties in top 10 list

LEADING local estate agent Mullucks Wells says it's "entirely appropriate" that Essex and Hertfordshire have both featured in a list of top ten English counties in which to raise a child.

The neighbouring counties occupy positions next to each other in the table, with Hertfordshire in fifth and Essex in sixth place, following a study published by Witter Towbars.

Responding to the report, Mullucks Wells residential director William Wells said: "We're pleased to hear about Essex and Hertfordshire's high positions in the table, which are entirely appropriate and come as no surprise whatsoever. We've always known that this region is an excellent place for families to live, with its superb schooling, vibrant community spirit, and excellent recreational facilities. This study simply confirms what we originally believed to be the case."

William Wells is residential director of Mullucks Wells

The report rated each region based on factors including the cost of a three-bedroom house, the average annual disposable income, the number of child-friendly activities available, the percentage of schools listed as good or outstanding, and other considerations such as the average time children spent outdoors. Each county was given a percentage rating; the higher the rating, the better that place is deemed for raising a child.

Essex and Hertfordshire were beaten by Surrey, Cheshire, Buckinghamshire and Oxfordshire, which occupied the first four places respectively. The counties of Shropshire, Hampshire, North Yorkshire, and Tyne & Wear completed the rest of the table.

William Wells added: "Those of us who are already fortunate enough to live here also know that this part of the world is perfectly placed for access to all of the world-class attractions that London and Cambridge have to offer. So now that the word seems to be spreading, we are expecting a surge of newcomers to snap up homes on the market here."

Insurance premiums could eventually become cheaper

Your motor insurance could drop – in 2018

THE announcement in March that the Government has reconsidered its decision to change the calculations for long-term injury payments will halt further price increases for motor insurance and may result in reductions over the course of the next few months.

The Government had originally announced that it was reviewing the "Ogden" rate, a discount applied to compensation payments to counteract potential increases in awards as a result of investment, meaning a dramatic increase in compensation payments that insurers would have to pay as a result of long-term, life-affecting personal injuries.

Although the reversal has yet to be passed in Parliament, the news has been greeted with relief by insurance companies who were increasing insurance premiums to compensation for a potential increase in costs.

Pressure

There is no doubt that pressure applied by insurers on government and the bad publicity generated by potential insurance premium increases has had the required effect, albeit at the expense of some injury awards. Clearly government feels that the needs of the masses outweigh the needs of the few.

It is fair to say that the Government's original calculations to increase awards were based on a flawed equation, basing investments on low-yield government bonds rather than a more lucrative solution that could be obtained elsewhere.

Don't expect to see an immediate drop in your motor insurance premium, the underlying trend is still on an upward curve, despite the original announcement in March of this year, although I expect rates will now start to level off with the prospect of reductions in early 2018.

Best advice still remains to check cover and restrictions alongside of price. All of us, enjoy the prospect of low-cost motor insurance; however, beware cheap imitations.

The only time you get to judge the value of your policy is when you come to make a claim; don't get caught out by accident!

BOOKSHELF

Why commit the moments you've almost died to print? Maggie O'Farrell tells ELLA WALKER how her daughter propelled her to write new memoir, I Am, I Am, I Am

FOR someone who's written about all the times she's almost died, and now has to talk about it, Maggie O'Farrell is surprisingly cheerful.

The author laughs loudly and frequently, and when asked whether writing a memoir is a bit like writing your own obituary, she jokes, "18 brushes with death!"

But Maggie, 45, doesn't actually like being centre of attention ("I was never one of those kids who wanted to be in the school play, quite the opposite") and you get the sense she'd much rather be at home in Edinburgh, swimming in the sea, or writing novels in the cracks of time that appear between looking after her three young children, than focusing on her darkest moments. And yet, the Coleraine-born novelist has gone and written a memoir.

I Am, I Am, I Am: Seventeen Brushes With Death began in private as an extension of the diaries Maggie has kept since she was young ("There must be hundreds by now") and was never written with the intention that it would one day be published.

"It was something that crept up on me," says the author, writer of After You'd Gone, This Must Be The Place and Costa Novel Awards 2010 winner The Hand That First Held Mine. She muses: "Books are filters for all sorts of things..."

It's a leap when a well-loved fiction writer turns to memoir, a genre that can be sluggish with indulgent autobiographical notes and mushy sentiment, but I Am, I Am, I Am doesn't slide into those traps. Instead, it's deftly written, emotionally bruising and blazing with honesty.

Riven into 17 near-fatal experiences, all scrambled out of chronological order and marked by antique anatomical drawings – a delicate skeleton inside a marble sculpture; a spine suspended, free of its ribs and pelvic anchor; a blackened lung frothing with itchy-bitty alveoli – it recalls the terrifying moments Maggie tussled with the possibility she may not take another breath.

There are instances that are almost universal – that stomach-tumbling fear that comes when you realise you've swum out of your depth; feeling the whoosh of a lorry as it hurtles by too close and perilously fast; sprinting across a road as your parents yell at you to slow down, to look where you're going – and others that are unimaginably scary – a knife-point mugging; a debilitating childhood illness; a labour gone horribly awry.

While slivers of herself undoubtedly appear in her previous books, memoir, Maggie says, is close to the bone. "It does feel much more exposing, because even if you put something in a novel that did come from real life, you've always got the mask of fiction to hide behind."

She decided to step out from behind that mask for her eight-year-old daughter, who was born with a severe immunology disorder that means, if she collides with one of her triggers ("If she eats something with a trace of a nut. Or if she sits at a table where someone has recently consumed sesame seeds. Or if an egg is cracked nearby," Maggie writes. "I could go on,") it can plunge her into critical anaphylactic shock. "So, she has quite a few brushes with death herself," she explains. "I began writing something about it in private for myself, to come to terms with that, to try and understand what she was going through – and also how best to help her – but it got larger and larger."

She ended up mentioning the growing manuscript to her agent, who gradually persuaded her to share it.

"The structure allows me to reveal almost as much as I conceal," says Maggie, explaining how she managed to execute a kind of hopscotch between what is and isn't told. "There's an awful lot that isn't in the book. Yes, some of it is years or times when not much happened, but there's also other stuff in there that I don't want to talk about, obviously, and the structure of the book allows me to skip over those bits."

One of those bits she does include – a mountain path encounter with a murderer – is a story she'd only ever previously told her husband, the writer William Sutcliffe.

"I'm not saying I'm not going to talk about it," she explains cautiously, "but writing it wasn't actually too bad, because it felt very private and I could just do it. But I did an event the other day and they wanted to ask about it a lot, and I did find verbalising it quite difficult."

She has pickled the story in ink until her daughter is old enough to understand why, when she asked a couple of years ago whether she and Maggie could go hiking together, just the two of them, the answer was no. "I remember I said, 'I don't think so, we can all go together', and her asking why. Obviously I wasn't going to tell her then, because she was only six. I remember thinking, 'At some point, I will have to tell you that story' – and how on earth do you have that conversation with your child?"

Writing I Am, I Am, I Am involved not just scouring the nebulous and less-visited sections of her memory, but also required unearthing childhood medical records from when she contracted viral encephalitis. The former deputy literary editor of the Independent On Sunday says writing it was a very different ordeal compared to her usual work. "A novel feels like creation, and this felt like excavation," she says, adding wryly. "I don't know how cathartic it was."

She had always been wary of the idea of memoir "just because it felt like such a tax on your friends and family, and I wouldn't ever want to expose people". So, she was discreet; family members' names are absent, their roles pared back, their privacy guarded. Maggie doesn't subscribe to the view that, as an author, the people in your life are fair game for spinning into fiction. "I don't think everything around you as a writer belongs to you – your own life does, but your own life is linked with other people's so you have to be very careful at those junctures."

"I mean, I wouldn't want to be written about in a memoir particularly," she adds with a light laugh.

Further non-fiction is not on Maggie's to-do list (but "never say never"), however, another novel is. "I usually have something in the back of my mind simmering away, and I have started something, another novel," she teases. "It feels a huge relief to go back to being able to make things up."

■ I Am, I Am, I Am: Seventeen Brushes With Death by Maggie O'Farrell is published in hardback by Tinder Press, priced £18.99 (ebook £9.49). Available now.

LATEST TITLES

THE WARDROBE MISTRESS by Patrick McGrath, Hutchinson, £14.99, ebook £9.99

SET in the freezing, fog-bound austerity of London in 1947, we open on the funeral of Charlie 'Gricey' Grice, one of the great actors of his day, and pan across our key players – his widow Joan, a theatre wardrobe mistress and his daughter Vera.

Not long after her husband's death, Joan begins a complicated friendship with Charlie's under-study, Frank.

Joan starts to tailor Charlie's clothes for Frank, delving into her husband's voluminous wardrobe. But as this new intimacy grows, Joan – a Jew – makes the odious discovery that her husband was a fascist sympathiser.

This enthralling novel deftly evokes a powerful sense of place, with period details of austerity and backstage life subtly but credibly sketched in. Somber in mood and bleak in conclusion, it is a powerfully absorbing story of a woman betrayed in death, as in life.

SMILE by Roddy Doyle, Jonathan Cape, £14.99, ebook £9.99

RODDY Doyle leaves a portion of his trademark humour at the door in this tale of resurfacing childhood trauma and middle-age malaise.

After separating from his wife, Victor Forde is back living alone in the neighbourhood where he once went to school – in the 1960s, under the controversial Christian Brothers regime that would years later deliver Ireland one of its darkest abuse scandals.

It is a chance meeting, in his new local, with a man purporting to be an old classmate, that prompts Victor to recall his experiences at the hands of the Brothers.

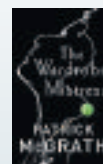

The progression of the book is not chronological and chapters flit around in time.

Doyle's skill with dialogue keeps a thread of Irish charm running through the novel, but the overall impression is of a writer trying to do something different. The shock 'twist' ending is a bold gamble.

JASON BYRNE TELLS MARION McMULLEN HOW HE IS TAPPING INTO SOME BRAIN POWER FOR HIS NEW COMEDY TOUR

How would you describe your new stand-up show The Man With Three Brains?

(LAUGHS) My show's quite mad and a lot happens. It's basically impro, organised stand-up and parts when people can get up and do stuff. It's just chaotic really. I'm probably wrong about three brains. It's probably 40 brains. It's fast and all the segments of my brain are just firing up at the same time. On stage it really flies.

What's been your best review so far?

AN audience member complained the other night she had a bad seat and couldn't see properly, but then she added 'You were so funny we couldn't give a sh*tte. (Laughs) Even people in sh*tte seats think the show is good.

How do you get in shape for the tour?

I'VE been doing something called Animal Flow. It's great for older people. It's like yoga for older people in their 40s. It's harder than yoga, but you are only an inch off the floor so if you fall you won't break anything.

It's amazing for your body and I have to do stuff like that. My show is so physical and Animal Flow is really good and uses every muscle in your body. Cage fighters like Conor McGregor do it.

I'm crawling around the ground at 45 years of age. (Laughs) Who am I trying to impress? Certainly not my wife any more.

Do you like keeping fit?

I DO something wherever I go - judo, boxing, jujitsu. You have to be fit because you use so much energy performing live. (Chuckles) I'm the only act who leaves the Edinburgh Festival really fit and looking brilliant.

I don't drink in Edinburgh either. I had two friends from Finland over on holiday at the festival and they just destroyed themselves. I was like their dad dropping them off and then going home.

When I was in Edinburgh in my 20s I did go nuts and had great crack, but you learn from experience and I can't do it anymore. I even had a friend who complained 'You're a very bad drinker for an Irishman.' It's probably a good thing.

Do you still enjoy appearing at the festival?

I'VE been doing Edinburgh for 21 years. I'm going to keep coming until no-one turns up. I keep expecting a dip because that's entertainment, but it hasn't happened.

What do your two sons think of your day job?

MY 10-year-old is absolutely obsessed with me going for a pint. He's always asking 'Are you going for a pint? Are you going for a pint?'

My other son's just started a drama course and he's definitely going to be an actor. He loves it.

Even the people in the bad seats think the show is good

He and his friend Derek say when they are 18 they are going to the local town to get tattoos and pints and then I can collect them. He says they want hamburger tattoos on their belly buttons. He's going to be a lunatic. It's great. More material for me.

What is family life like?

I'M the only Manchester United fan in my house. The rest support Liverpool. I've known John Bishop for over 10 or 12 years and he still thinks I'm a Liverpool fan. I have to keep reminding him and he goes 'Oh, yeah, oh, yeah.'

Any more TV in store?
I'VE just done a scavenger hunt-style show for Dave called Don't Say It, Bring It. It's been so much fun.

A lot of TV you don't know how they are going to edit it and what it's going to look like. I saw the pilot for this and it's Spanish and the two fellas in it are just stunning looking and the TV guys told me 'Don't worry Jason you can still do it.'

I also looked at the American and German versions, but they are not nice to the contestants, they don't want them to win, so I did it my way.

Where did you film?

WE went to places like Bristol, Belfast, Glasgow, Edinburgh, Newcastle, and Weston-super-Mare, which has fantastic old people everywhere. They can win from £50 to £1,000. I'm a nervous wreck when they get to £500. I was trying to put the money in their pockets and the director was saying 'Stop doing that Jason.'

It's a great show and starts in October. Dave being Dave they are going to be doing two episodes a day for a week and will keep showing it endlessly. I've done 20 episodes and hope to do more.

So, are you feeling brainy?
I KNOW scientists will say 'It's not three brains. It's just the many thoughts in the different segments in your head,' but it's my wordplay on the film title The Man With Two Brains. There's a young girl who works in the office and when I first mentioned the title of the show she said 'Do you think people will think it's about the movie?'

Can you imagine a show about the breakdown of the movie and how Steve Martin wrote it? Fing hilarious. I should do it one night just to see the look on people's faces.

■ The Man With Three Brains tour starts on October 4. Go to jasonbyrne.ie for details.

■ CALL The Midwife's Laura Main, above, is to play Princess Fiona in the new UK nationwide tour of Shrek The Musical.

She will play selected dates on the tour to fit in with her filming commitments and said: 'I've been waiting a long time for an adventure like this to come along and now that it has I am ready to swap the surgery for the swamp in one of my favourite musicals.'

The year-long tour begins in December.

■ FORMER Coronation Street actor Kevin Kennedy, inset, is tucking into the UK tour of Kay Mellor's Fat Friends - The Musical.

He joins Freddie Flintoff, X Factor's Sam Bailey and Jodie Prenger in the world premiere, which opens at Leeds Grand Hotel in November before touring until the start of next June.

■ Go to fatfriendsthemusical.com for details.

■ STEPHEN MANGAN, inset, Toby Jones and Zoe Wanamaker are to appear in a new production of Harold Pinter's The Birthday Party next year to mark the 60th anniversary of the critically acclaimed play.

Director Ian Rickson said: 'It has this kind of anarchic, punk spirit and I'm just so excited about directing it.' The production previews from the Harold Pinter Theatre in London from January 9 and runs until April 14.

MUSIC

The Horrors return

Darryl Webber looks forward to the return of Southend band The Horrors who have constantly reinvented themselves since rising out of their crypt a decade ago

In 2006, The Horrors burst out of a Southend scene they'd created into the daylight of mainstream attention. Looking like a bunch of Gothic Victorian dandies and Velvet Underground-inspired groovers, they traded in a deliciously dark mix of swampy garage and 60s psych.

They went by names like Joshua Von Grimm, Spider Webb and Coffin Joe. Their singer, Faris Rotter, was impossibly tall and thin, and looked like the lovechild of Nico and John Cooper Clarke (not as far-fetched as you might imagine, by the way).

But there was more to them than the look. They had the songs too. Short, sharp bursts of frenetic noise that attracted a cultish following when they played live. Their debut album, Strange House, released 10 years ago, was the apotheosis of this incarnation of the band.

When they re-emerged in 2009, the band had stripped off the make-up and goth glad-rags and gone in a new musical direction. Their single Sea Within A Sea was a nine-minute epic inspired by Krautrock and the album that followed, Primary Colours, showed a mastery of drone rock and psychedelic shoegaze. It wrong-footed critics and fans alike, but they loved it. More experimentation followed with their third album, Skying, in 2011 which featured big, 80s-inspired and prominent use of synths.

2014's Luminous continued that theme but, in retrospect, for The Horrors it marked a point at which they hadn't moved onwards like they had before. As keyboard player turned bassist Rhys Webb (former Spider Webb) said: "Maybe it was time for something else."

That something different is The Horrors' fifth album, V. The band wrote and recorded out of their usual comfort zone, and worked with producer Paul Epworth, best known for his collaborations with million-sellers like Adele and Coldplay but who had also worked with Futureheads, The Long Blondes and Death From Above 1979. It took the band in a different direction again, giving a pop glister to their dark and diverse sound. V takes in dance, trance and 80s synth-pop but it's always distinctly The Horrors. It's adventurous, exciting and surprising.

"It is a risk," says frontman Faris. "But life isn't much fun without risk. It's the antithesis of being creative if you know what you're going to be doing every time."

V is released on this Friday, September 22. The band are playing an in-store session at Rough Trade East this Friday. They tour the UK in October playing Koko, London, on October 29. Find out more at www.thehorrors.co.uk

Join John and the current line-up of the band at the Bassment on Thursday, doors open at 8pm and entry is £10. Support comes from Southbound. OMD, Cliffs Pavilion, Southend, Wednesday, November 1
Synth-pop pioneers OMD are back with their 13th studio album The Punishment of Luxury - and you'll be able to hear some of the new material when their 18-date tour visits Southend. "On this album we have managed to make beautiful things out of noises and repetitive patterns," said singer Andy McCluskey. "The trouble is, we just can't help but write a catchy melody."

FOOD & DRINK

THIS autumnal dish is sure to please hungry crowds. Serve with some mixed greens.

INGREDIENTS:

(Serves 4-6)
1.5-2kg shoulder of pork
Olive oil
4tsp dried wild oregano (or regular oregano)
3tsp celery salt
3tsp English mustard powder
3tsp coarse black pepper
3tsp ground coriander
650ml pale ale or lager
For the plum sauce:
600g plums, pitted and roughly chopped
3tsp ground coriander
1tsp cayenne pepper
½ small bunch (about 15g) tarragon leaves finely chopped
200ml water, plus extra as needed
Maldon sea salt flakes
Freshly ground black pepper

METHOD:

1. Preheat the oven to 170 degrees C/Gas Mark 3. Line a roasting tin with baking paper.
2. Place the pork in the tin and, remove any string. Score the skin, and drizzle over olive oil and rub it into the meat.
3. Mix the oregano, celery salt, mustard powder, pepper and coriander together in a small bowl. Scatter the mixture all over the pork and use your hands to rub it in, especially on the underside and deep into the skin on top. Pour the beer around the pork and add a little splash on top, ensuring you don't rinse off the spice mixture. Roast for four hours, or until cooked through – check it after three hours and if it is browning excessively, cover it with a double layer of kitchen foil for the remaining cooking time.

4. If the skin has not crisped up when the cooking time has elapsed, remove the pork from the oven and increase the oven temperature to 220 degrees C/Gas Mark 7. Using tongs, carefully peel the skin off the meat and lay it flat on a rack over a baking tray. Roast the skin for a further 10-15 minutes, or until crispy. Meanwhile, cover the pork loosely with foil and leave to rest for about 30 minutes.
5. To make the sauce, put the plums, ground coriander and cayenne pepper into a saucepan set over a medium-low heat and season with salt and pepper. Sweat the plums for about 15 minutes, mashing them until they soften and are cooked.
6. Stir in the chopped tarragon and add the water, increase the heat to medium and cook gently for about 10 minutes, or until the sauce has reduced to a gravy-like consistency. Add more water if necessary to reach your preferred sauce consistency. Carve or shred your pork and serve with the crackling and plum sauce.

Delicious dishes to feast your eyes on

Persian cook Sabrina Ghayour tells ELLA WALKER that her food is about love, honesty and simplicity – in generous portions FEEDING people is integral to Sabrina Ghayour. Even if you're a stranger meeting the Persian cook for the first time, she'll tell you: "I want to spoil you and the only way I know how is to feed you senseless."

The Tehran-born cookbook writer, famed for her best-selling debut recipe collection Persiana, will be helping the rest of us feed each other senseless with her opulent new volume, Feasts.

"I would describe it as a serious business," she says wryly, when asked to explain traditional Persian feasting. "We are really lighthearted; we're the 'fun bunch' of the Middle East. We're the busybodies, all up in your business, we're loud and we're fun and we like to dance."

As for the food, there is volume and variety "but all in a strange balance. Lots of vegetables, an aubergine dish on the side, yoghurt dishes (on huge platters), lots of tearing flatbreads, fresh herbs, blocks of cheese, fresh wet walnuts, rice and stew – stew is the cornerstone of Persian family cooking."

Sabrina Ghayour

Then, if it's a really special occasion, there'd be kebabs.

Not 3am-after-a-night-out kebabs, explains Sabrina, 41, but meat roasted over flames until golden and spitting with flavour. "You generally can't walk afterwards," she adds happily.

While Feasts, the book, is not wholly traditional and not wholly Persian ("I could do chow mein and people would say, 'I love your Persian chow mein'"), volume and variety are still key.

"There'll always be five or six things on the table because it's in my culture," says London-based Sabrina.

But that doesn't mean the recipes are tricky or time-consuming.

Whether it's tamarind-doused ribs or butterfly leg of lamb, ingredients are pared back to the essentials, and comfort is crucial.

"Comfort is pretty much what I eat all the time – I can't do fuss," says Sabrina, who admits she had beans on toast for lunch, and shared that fact with her 30,000 Instagram followers.

"People are like, 'yes!' Because it's just real."

She's not afraid to put her more "disgusting failures" online, either. "You have to," she says, "because being perfect is just so naff, and I'm so not perfect in any way."

The self-taught cook formerly worked in hospitality before starting her own supper club, and has been interested in food ever since she "ousted" her mother and grandmother from the kitchen as a child.

"My mother pushed me into the kitchen to mess around, because clearly I wanted to," she remembers.

"Teaching yourself is a good way to go because it makes you fearless. I'm not trying to please anyone. It's made me much braver, and it has made me more creative."

Sabrina, who spends chunks of the year exploring Asia to find new inspiration, is a heart-on-your-sleeve, self-confessed "pie and mash girl", whose food is about love, honesty and simplicity, whether she's cooking it herself or eating out.

"It's not that I don't like fine dining but it is not where I get much inspiration. The fact you have to try to understand (what you're eating) winds me up.

"I'd much rather sit down with a good bap filled with pork and apple sauce, or a bao bun, or just a really good plate of pasta.

"I'd rather spend my money on a really good loaf of bread and a lump of cheese than caviar and lobster."

If anyone can turn a loaf of bread and a lump of cheese into a banquet, it's Sabrina.

■ Feasts by Sabrina Ghayour is published by Mitchell Beazley (octopus books.co.uk), priced £20. Photography Kirk Kirkham.

I'VE always been mesmerised by red cars. My first one was a Mini I named Charlie. It had a hole in its floor and when it rained the passengers would bail out with a teacup I kept in the car for the purpose.

One red car blew up on the motorway; another was stolen; yet another lost an embarrassing argument with a car park wall.

I've been driven up the garden path by red cars because of seeing with my eyes and not thinking with my brain.

A red car! I must have it! Then I'm lured into the misery beneath. Wine can be the same. We're tempted into buying because we like the look of the label. They're clever, those marketing people.

To help you buy wines based on facts, here's a run-through of some terms you might see on a wine bottle.

RAISE A GLASS

WITH JANE CLARE

■ Vieilles vignes: This is French for old vines. Old vines are the wise things of the vineyard. They're not young and giddy, they don't produce lots of grapes, but the ones which are harvested have a special, concentrated, quality from those sage old vines.

■ Joven: You'll see this on Spanish wines and it means young. If you like aged rioja with classic smoky, woody and vanilla notes, you won't get that in a joven wine. They are young, fruit-forward, fresh and easy to drink.

■ Gran Reserva: The polar opposite of joven. Rioja wines are treated with extra care and spend at least two years in oak and three in bottle before being released.

■ Classico: This Italian term indicates that a wine was produced in the heart of a region where the terroir is "classic" for that style. You'll find Chianti wines – but a step above is Chianti Classico; and then there are basic Soave wines and Soave Classico and so on.

■ Frizzante: If your sparkling wine has the Italian word frizzante on the label it means it is semi-sparkling. This is opposed to spumante, which is fully sparkling. If you like your bubbles, don't miss out on half of them!

I could go on for a very long time. If you're baffled drop me a line at jane@onefootinthegrapes.co.uk. Only about wine mind. I can't help with plumbing or wallpapering.

■ In my glass: Here are a couple of reds now the seasons are changing.

I've been bowled over by KWV Cinsaut (£7.99, 13.5% abv) which I sampled at a wine tasting with the Co-op team. This wine has had 10 months in French oak and is light-bodied like a pinot noir. It is dappled with cherries, strawberries and flashes of spice. It isn't available in all of Co-op's stores but if you hunt around you should find it.

■ Château La Dournie St Chinian 2013 (£8.99, or £8.09 in a buy six deal at Majestic, 14% abv) is from the Languedoc and is a blend of syrah, grenache noir and carignan and is one of those warming wines which gives you a cuddle on a rainy day. It has been partially oaked and offers aromas of red fruits, cherries and spice, together with a touch of herb, bramble fruits and undergrowth. In the mouth it is soft, supple but rich with fruits and subtlety of oak influence.

PS I still drive a red car. ■ Jane is a member of the Circle of Wine Writers. For more from her see onefootinthegrapes.co.uk

INGREDIENTS:

(Serves 2-8)
600g boneless, skinless chicken thigh fillets
1tsp ground turmeric
1tsp ground cinnamon
1tsp ground coriander
1tsp ground cumin
1tsp cayenne pepper
4 fat garlic cloves, crushed
Finely grated zest of 1 unwaxed lemon
Juice of ½ lemon
4tbsp Greek yogurt
Olive oil
Maldon sea salt flakes
Freshly ground black pepper

To serve:
6-8 round flatbreads of your choosing (or use pittas)
200g Greek yogurt
4 large tomatoes, sliced, then each slice cut in half
1 large red onion, halved and finely sliced into half-moons
1 small bunch (about 30g) of fresh coriander, roughly chopped
Gherkins or cucumbers in brine (as many as you like), finely sliced

METHOD:

1. Place the chicken thigh fillets in a bowl. Add the spices, garlic, lemon zest and juice, yogurt, a good drizzle of olive oil (about two tablespoons) and a generous amount of salt and black pepper. Using your hands, work the marinade into the chicken, ensuring it is mixed evenly and coats every exposed part of the fillets. Cover with cling film and marinate for 30 minutes, or overnight in the fridge.

2. Drizzle a little olive oil into a large frying pan set over a medium heat. When the oil is hot, add the chicken – reduce the heat if the thighs begin to cook too quickly. Fry gently for 10-12 minutes on each side, or until the thighs have a nice, deep, golden brown crust and are cooked through. When done, remove and cut the thighs widthways very thinly.

3. To serve, lay a flatbread on your work surface. Spread Greek yogurt across the surface. Place a line of tomato half-moons down the middle. Stack some shredded chicken over this, then follow with the onion, coriander and a few slices of pickled cucumbers.
4. Fold up the bottom of the flatbread, then fold over the sides to enclose the filling tightly and repeat with the remaining flatbreads.

TALK about a quick and easy brunch.

You can't beat a piece of toast sometimes, but rather than reach for the peanut butter and jam, why not try these slightly fancier ricotta and fig toasts topped with candied chilli bacon.

They make for a decadent brunch, comforting late-night snack, and if you halved the slices, could become great pre-dinner snacks for party guests.

INGREDIENTS:

(Makes 4)
200g thick-cut unsmoked streaky bacon (approximately 14 slices)
1tbsp pul biber chilli flakes, plus extra to serve (available online, or use standard chilli flakes)
4tbsp clear honey
200g ricotta cheese
1 heaped tsp dried thyme, plus extra to serve zest of 1 unwaxed orange
4 large slices of sourdough bread
4 figs, each cut into 5-6 segments
Maldon sea salt flakes
Freshly ground black pepper

METHOD:

1. Heat a large frying pan

LATE NIGHT SNACK

WHIPPED RICOTTA AND FIG TOASTS

over a high heat. Line a plate with a double layer of kitchen paper. When the frying pan is hot, add the bacon and dry-fry for a few minutes on each side, until the fat has rendered and the bacon is golden brown, completely crisp and can be crumbled with ease. Transfer to the paper-lined plate to drain excess oil.
2. When the bacon is dry, crumble it into a small bowl and crush it finely with a fork. Mix in the pul biber and honey and set aside.

3. Put the ricotta, dried thyme and orange zest into a large bowl, season generously with salt and pepper and whip until smooth and a little aerated.

4. Toast the bread, then divide the ricotta mixture between the slices. Reserve a little of the bacon mixture for sprinkling, then divide the remaining mixture into four portions and spoon one portion over the ricotta on each slice of bread. Arrange the fig slices on top, then sprinkle over the reserved bacon and a little dried thyme and pul biber to serve.

FILM REVIEWS

Taron Egerton as Eggsy and Colin Firth as Harry Hart in Kingsman: The Golden Circle

KINGSMAN: THE GOLDEN CIRCLE (15)

In 2014, director Matthew Vaughn and co-writer Jane Goldman vividly brought to life the Kingsman comic book series as a raucous action thriller, laden with gratuitous violence and casual disregard for political correctness.

The big budget sequel reunites the cast of the original film with some familiar Hollywood faces for an explosive globe-trotting caper that galvanises British and American secret services against a diabolical adversary.

Gary Unwin aka Eggsy (Taron Egerton) is bereft following the supposed death of his Kingsman mentor, Harry Hart (Colin Firth). His misery is compounded by the destruction of the Kingsman headquarters by a secret new world order known as The Golden Circle.

Thankfully, tech support guru Merlin (Mark Strong) escapes the blast zone and pledges his support to Eggsy. Together, they head to America to seek help from Kingsman's swaggering Transatlantic counterparts, Statesman, headed by Champagne (Jeff Bridges).

He partners Eggsy with secret agent Tequila (Channing Tatum) and his sassy tech support wizard, Ginger Ale (Halle Berry). Their elusive target is cunning criminal mastermind Poppy Adams (Julianne Moore), who has close ties to The Golden Circle.

LAWRENCE OF ARABIA (PG)

At selected cinemas

The 70mm restoration of David Lean's sweeping 1962 historical epic, which recounts an adventurer's extraordinary life in flashback after his accidental death.

British Army lieutenant T.E. Lawrence (Peter O'Toole) is stationed in Cairo during the First World War. An Arab Bureau chief dispatches Lawrence to observe Prince Faisal (Alec Guinness), who is gathering forces in an attempt to rebel against the Turks.

En route, Lawrence meets Colonel Brighton (Anthony Quayle), who urges restraint around the Prince, but the lieutenant ignores his superior and makes a bold impression on Faisal with his forthright views.

Friendship is forged between the two men and Lawrence suggests that the Prince should launch a surprise attack on Aqaba by sending his men across the seemingly impassable Nefud Desert.

Sherif Ali (Omar Sharif) and a platoon of 50 men accompany Lawrence on the arduous trek and as he crosses the sea of baking hot sand, the British military man shows extraordinary courage and determination to protect the Prince's men from the elements.

Shia LaBeouf as John McEnroe and Sverrir Gudnason as Bjorn Borg

Classic encounter

BORG VS MCENROE (15)

On Saturday July 5 1980, reigning Wimbledon men's champion and world number one Bjorn Borg faced hot-headed challenger and world number two John McEnroe on the Centre Court of the All England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club.

The Swede was aiming to win a fifth consecutive title on grass in front of a partisan crowd while the American wanted to silence doubters after his ill-tempered semi-final win over Jimmy Connors.

The showdown – billed as Ice Man versus Super Brat – lasted almost four hours, including a titanic fourth-set tie break, and pushed both men to the limit of their physical and mental endurance.

More than 35 years later, the 1980 final remains one of the greatest matches played on the hallowed turf of SW19.

Danish filmmaker Janus Metz Pedersen immortalises this battle of fortitude and sweat-drenched resilience in Borg Vs McEnroe.

His assured dramatisation

Tuva Novotny as Mariana Simionescu and Stellan Skarsgård as Lennart Bergelin in Borg Vs McEnroe

weights affection and sympathy heavily in favour of the champion.

It's no surprise that in Scandinavia, the film's title is truncated to Borg.

Sverrir Gudnason and Shia LaBeouf serve and volley solid performances as the tennis greats, with a focus on the former's dreamy good looks and gentlemanly demeanour.

Even if you don't know the outcome, Pedersen's picture makes abundantly clear who deserves to collapse in tears of joy after a hard-fought battle from the baseline.

Borg (Gudnason) arrives in London with his gruff coach Lennart Bergelin (Stellan Skarsgård) and the burden of expectation on his shoulders. Romanian fiancée Mariana Simionescu (Tuva Novotny) has packed Bjorn's bags and he stays in the same hotel room, a slave to superstition and ritual.

In stark contrast, McEnroe (Shia LaBeouf) arrives alone and takes a laid-back approach to the championship, including partying late at night with fellow player Vitas Gerulaitis (Robert Emmis).

McEnroe isn't concerned about the hostile reception he is likely to receive.

"If I beat Borg in the final, it's very hard to boo me if I'm number one," cockily asserts the American.

A patchwork of flashbacks draws parallels between the players' formative years, revealing the young Bjorn (played by Leo Borg and Markus Mossberg) struggled to control his temper and had to be reined in by Lennart.

"Promise to never show a single emotion again," the coach firmly instructs his teenage charge. "Be like a pressure cooker."

Borg Vs McEnroe heeds that advice, bottling emotions beneath a pristine exterior and some briskly edited tennis sequences.

Only once, during a fleeting scene at Heathrow airport, does that cool exterior threaten to crack.

The final match consumes around 20 minutes of the running time and captures some of the tension that crackled in the air that glorious day.

A couple of points separated the two men – for director Pedersen, it's clear-cut.

Game, set, unevenly matched.

New decor directions

Moody blues, oversized florals and woodland settings are the new-season interiors trends to covet

While the temperature may be dropping as autumn arrives, there's no need to feel the chill indoors. The season's three hottest new decor trends are rich with glowing colour, pattern and detail, and we can't wait to try them.

MIDNIGHT TROPICS

Deep moody blue shades and a focus on texture and luxury come together for this opulent trend.

"Midnight Tropics sees the summery tropical theme continue and develop throughout the autumn and winter," says Clotilde Passalacqua, interior design leader, Ikea.

"Instead of featuring bright and playful colours, this trend pairs rich, dark tones – such as navy and emerald green – with accents of brass and gold, to create an exotic and luxurious look with a touch of opulence. Accessorising with succulents and tropical plants is key, as is artwork and patterns that take their cue from nature, and in particular, feature foliage."

Many major home brands have embraced this luxe look, including Marks & Spencer with its Manhattan collection (main image). It has a rich palette of inky matte black and brass accents, and is inspired by the opulence of New York's luxury hotels, with details including soft velvets and green marble, mixed with bold monochrome furniture.

MOODY BLOOMS

A berry-hued palette of blueberry, cherry, deep plum and purple, paired with designs featuring lush blooms, is a chic, seasonal way to interpret the fashionably botanical trend.

"This season our collections draw inspiration from the humble tulip bulb that became more precious than gold and five times more expensive than a house. It's a bulb that went on to inspire generations," says Tricia Guild, founder and creative director, Designers Guild.

WOODLAND WALK

Our love affair with nature and the great outdoors continues, and one of the easiest ways to refresh an interior is to take inspiration from the countryside.

"Woodland walk captures the tones and textures of an autumnal country walk, creating a cosy living space with warm aubergine and mulberry colours, used across chunky knits and patterned textiles," says Andrew Tanner, design manager for home and seasonal, Sainsbury's Home.

"These shades pop against mustard and duck egg blue tones, seen on ceramics and home accessories, complementing this classic look. There are figures in a rich, brass metallic finish, and we have a fragrance of Applewood and Clove – a woody, spicy scent – all finishing touches for an interior which is cosy, nurturing and perfect for winter."

MEL'S JUNGLE CLEARANCE

Mel Gibson

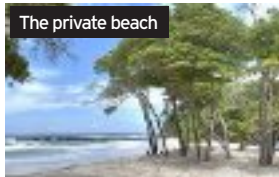

Most Hollywood stars spend their lives amassing considerable property empires, and Mel Gibson is no different.

During a career that has spanned 30 years and included hits such as the Mad Max and Lethal Weapon series and Braveheart, Gibson has used his considerable fortune to buy half a dozen properties.

This includes homes in California, Costa Rica – which he bought while filming the movie Apocalypto – as well as properties in Fiji, Australia and Montana.

He has begun offloading them though, and recently sold a home in Sherman Oaks, California for £2.1m, as well as putting his Malibu mansion on the market for £17.5m, which he bought from actor David Duchovny for £11.5m.

The private beach

One of the bedrooms

His latest disposal is one of his Costa Rican properties. It's a 403-acre beachfront jungle estate on Costa Rica's Nicoya Peninsula on the country's northern Pacific Coast.

It includes three houses, two of which are single-storey, two-bedroom properties, each with their own swimming pool and barbecue area.

The third property is the main house called Casa Guanacaste. It's a two-storey hacienda-style residence overlooking the estate's private beach with seven bedrooms, eight bathrooms and a large pool.

The estate would suit a wildlife enthusiast as the area contains howler monkeys and ocelots, plus its beach is used by turtles to lay eggs.

The Playa Barrigona estate, is for sale at £29.75m.

PIROUETTE ON INTO THIS PRETTY PAD

Ballet Rambert is the UK's oldest dance company and every year its troupe tour the UK.

It is currently touring its Ghost Dances and Nina Simone-inspired Goat pieces in London, Southampton, Salford, Norwich, Edinburgh, Bath and Bradford.

The company has an interesting history. It was founded in 1926 by Polish-born Dame Marie 'Mini' Rambert and became a household name during the early days of TV for its performances on the BBC.

It has also performed in many of the UK's best venues including recently London's Sadler's Wells, Theatre Royal in Brighton and Salford's The Lowry.

The Rambert Dance Company – as it used to be known – has worked with some of the world's greatest dancers including Vaslav Nijinski and more recently Ashley Page and is currently headquartered at the back of the National Theatre.

The studio where Marie Rambert founded the fledgling dance company during the 1920s and where she used to teach, is now for sale.

It's a Georgian Grade II listed maisonnette and is where she opened her fledgling school of dance in Bedford Gardens, Kensington in 1926.

Her dancers went on to perform regularly at the Mercury Theatre in nearby Notting Hill, before becoming a fully fledged dance company during the 1930s.

If you think the films of German-born director Roland Emmerich are dramatic, then you should see his house.

The 61-year-old has several big-budget hits under his belt including 2016's Independence Day: Resurgence.

But his home in Knightsbridge, central London, is more over the top than any of his productions.

The unusual property, which is one of four he owns around the world, is available for short-term rent and includes the director's zany art collection and furniture.

Each room is like a film set. The main lounge features a huge mural of Chairman Mao, as does one of the bathrooms, while another is dominated by a stuffed zebra. A third lounge is panelled from floor to ceiling in wood and Emmerich's study walls are covered with schoolroom chalk board.

The property's most unusual feature is its under-stair cupboard, which houses a full-size waxwork of the Pope. "The opportunity to live in such a unique home doesn't come around very often and residents will be equally challenged, fascinated and entertained by the décor throughout this property," says Daniel Bickerdike, lettings manager at KFH South Kensington.

The bustles and bonnets world of Jane Austen's books retain their global appeal despite it being 200 years since her death - which is being marked with a new £10 note and £2 coin bearing her image.

The Sense and Sensibility author died - it is believed - from the blood disorder Hodgkin's lymphoma on July 18, 1817 in Winchester. She was interred within the city's cathedral under the floor of the north aisle of the knave, where her gravestone can be seen.

Austen's connections to the city ran deep; just before her death she moved to a house in College Street with her sister Cassandra so she could be treated at the recently established Winchester Hospital.

She had been brought up in a village 15 miles north of Winchester and later lived in another satellite village, Chawton. While living there, Jane would visit Winchester for social occasions, including parties at this house next to the cathedral. The property, which Austen mentions in a 1814 letter, is a Grade II listed house within the cathedral's Inner Close.

'The Close' was built during the 1600s and has six bedrooms and three bathrooms. It's available to rent at £7,250 a month.

THIS COTTAGE MAY FLOAT YOUR BOAT

A cottage with links to the UK's greatest naval hero, Horatio Lord Nelson, has come up for sale.

The three-bedroom property, which is in an idyllic forest clearing, was built during the early years of the 19th century by Admiral Thomas Graves.

He was Lord Nelson's second in command and accompanied him during the Battle of Copenhagen which, although forgotten now, was key to securing Britain's naval and economic superiority over France.

After the battle, Nelson and Graves were thanked by parliament and Graves was made Knight Commander of the Bath and described by The Times as "a very gallant fellow".

The three-bed cottage

Before this Graves had already seen action during the Seven Years War, American War of Independence and French Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars.

But while Graves spent a lot of his life from an early age at sea in the service of his country, he was also a landlubber at heart.

He bought the Colwell Estate in Devon in 1793 for £1,210 and soon after the Battle of Copenhagen, built a house in a dingy dell within the estate for his daughter Mary.

After his death, the property was lived in by a woodsman, later used as a gamekeeper's cottage before falling into disrepair and later dereliction.

The property was bought during the 1980s by its current owner and restored. It has three bedrooms, two bathrooms, a reception room and comes with 75 acres of ancient woodland. It's for sale at £1.25m with Humberts Honiton (01404 517080).

YOUR GARDEN

With Diarmuid Gavin

Last spring I visited the bulb gardens of Keukenhof in Holland. The place was crammed with people and full of colour.

I would imagine the gardens aren't to everyone's taste – acre after acre of vibrant colours set out in broad strokes sweeping around trees, down slopes and reflected in still water. But I was seduced by the pure joy of the place and mesmerised by the fact that virtually all these colours came from bulbs.

They are amazing little packages of hope with a flower fully formed inside its own envelope. As autumn arrives and the soil is still warm, it is time to start planning, buying and planting these little marvels. I've been browsing the catalogues and here's my pick of the best for you.

Bloms have been in the gardening trade for more than 150 years since Walter Blom started his apprenticeship in the bulb industry in Holland back in 1850.

This year they won their 66th Gold Medal at the Chelsea Flower Show, so you can be sure of top-quality produce from here.

Their speciality is hyacinths – if you like intense colours, look out for 'Dark Dimension' with blooms so purple they're nearly black, and 'Woodstock' with rich wine purple bells. They also have some wonderful fritillaria species such as 'Adiyaman' – a magnificent border plant growing to 90cm in height, producing large numbers of dark plum purple bell-shaped flowers in April and May (blomsbulbs.com, 01234 709099).

Sarah Raven's passion is for cut flowers, and her collection of bulbs reflect her delight in blossoms that look wonderful in vases and will last. She has some very pretty Ranunculus such as 'Pauline Pink' in an exquisite shade of shell pink and 'Pauline Chocolate' which is a luscious deep red.

The corms are sometimes referred to as claws due to their appearance – plant them in autumn or spring with their 'fingers' facing downwards (sarahraven.com, 0345 092 0283).

Jacques Amand is always a good hunting ground for unusual bulbs, including rare historical tulips (jacquesamandintl.com, 020 8420 7110).

There's a very exuberant double late tulip called Vaya Con Dios, which starts life as mainly yellow, gaining apricot, orange and red hues as it matures. 'Victoria's Secret' has deep purplish blue flowers with a touch of lavender and violet running through it, and the centre of the flower is an attractive royal blue.

I love parrot tulips with their fringed edges. 'Parrot Sweet' has bright pink flowers suffused with white and greenish yellow which flowers in May.

'Copper Image' is also delightful with large double flowers of a copper colour flushed with salmon, also flowering in May.

No bulb planting session is complete without daffodils. J Parkers has a great bundle of orchid-type daffs – this is where the flower is split into segments giving it an orchid appearance. 'Lemon Beauty' is very striking – its ivory white blooms have a star-shaped lemon-yellow centre and the flowers of 'Mondragon' are a rich egg yolk colour (jparkers.co.uk, 0161 848 1100).

The huge swathes of colour in Keukenhof's bulb gardens may not be to everyone's taste

If you want a stunning wash of colour in spring, then now's the time to get planting

Bulbs really are a bright idea

'Mondragon' are a rich egg yolk colour (jparkers.co.uk, 0161 848 1100)

So whether you have pots and containers, borders or areas of grass, pop in a few parcels of bulbs and give yourself a nice surprise next spring.

A few tips to remember – plant bulbs as soon as you get them, with the exception of tulips which should be planted in November.

Generally you place them two to three times their own size deep in soil – a bit deeper in free-draining soil that tends to dry out in summer.

Place them with their shoot facing upwards – but don't worry if you can't figure it out, the bulb will still grow towards the light.

Finally, throw in a little bit of slow-release fertiliser to help it on its way. Good luck!

Gather fallen leaves to make great compost

Preparing for autumn

■ Clean up patios and paths before the onset of winter to prevent them getting slippery. Clean and put away your garden furniture until next spring.

■ Cut back fruited canes of raspberries and tie in new canes to supports.

■ Evergreen hedges can have their final trim before winter.

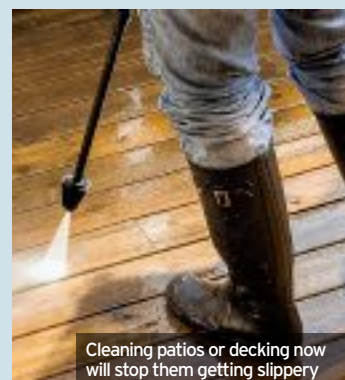

■ Lift main crop potatoes and store in a dark, frost-free area.
■ It's a good time to divide

JOBS FOR THE WEEK

plants in ponds to increase stock if desired or cut back overgrowth – you are aiming for around 50% plant coverage of the pond.

■ Install water butts to collect winter rainwater.

■ Get your compost bins or bags ready for collecting leaf fall which makes superb compost after leaves have broken down.

Cleaning patios or decking now will stop them getting slippery

ASK DIARMUID

Q I have a concrete bird bath but every time I put water in it, it turns rusty red by the next day. It does this whether I take it from the tap or my water butt.

Is there any type of sealer I can use without harming the birds?

Colin Forman

A There are organic and eco paints on the market which may be more bird friendly - some of these are plant based - but you'd need to read the ingredients to check if they contain lead and other heavy metals.

However, the red colour you are experiencing may be indicative of an algae - Haematococcus - which is a common occurrence in bird bath water and will happen whether the bird bath is made of concrete, plastic or steel.

The solution here is normal hygiene - scrubbing the bath and changing the water frequently.

PLANT OF THE WEEK

DAHLIA

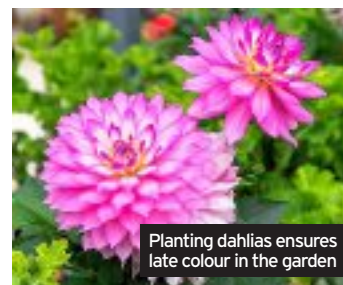

The most colourful gardens at the moment are those whose wise owners planted dahlias earlier in the season. I'm really enjoying the semi-cactus varieties which look lovely.

Their spidery blooms withstand rougher weather than their heavier counterparts and this lightness also requires less staking.

'Idylle' is one such variety with pale white and pink hues - a bit like raspberry ripple ice cream. 'Pink Preference' is also delightful, its pink blooms suffused with a hint of yellow at the base.

Lift after first frost and store tubers until next spring.

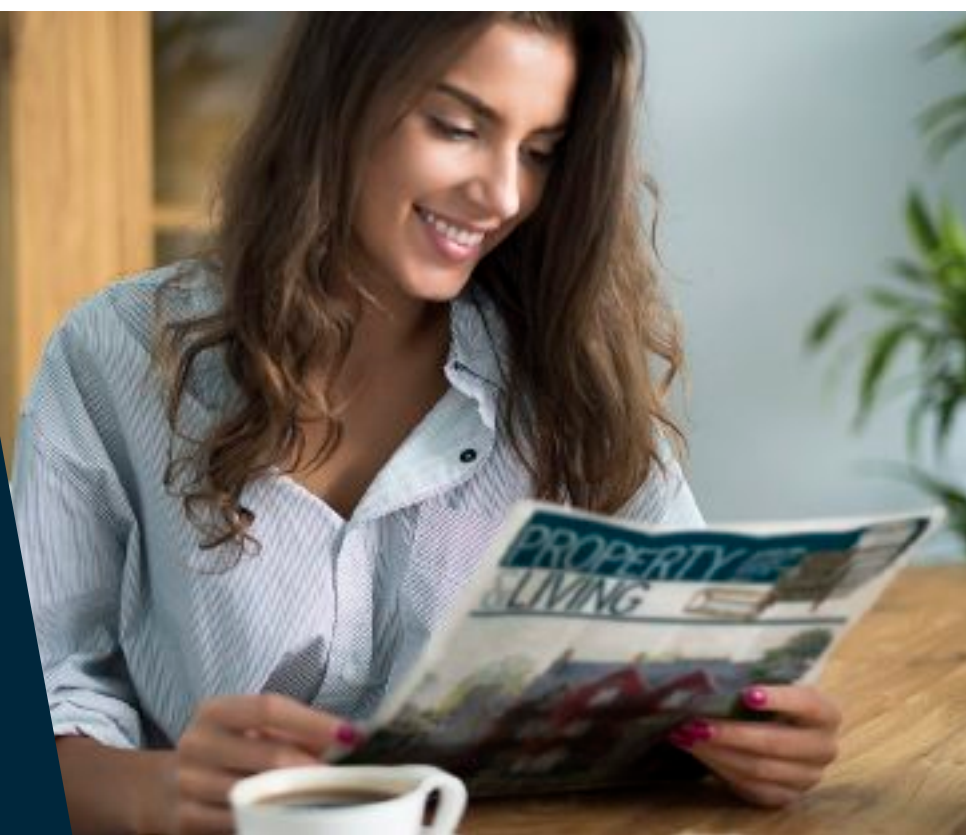

Planting dahlias ensures late colour in the garden

He was past us in seconds and away as fast as his smoky old engine would allow.

So here we have two clichés for the price of one; the young man who thinks he's at least as fast as Lewis Hamilton and will prove it, and the Volvo saloon that wants to take its occupants ever so gently to where they're headed.

Well, if the second part of the sentence was ever correct, it isn't now. Or only when who want it to be, for this biggest saloon in the Volvo range is certainly comfortable.

With leg stretching room front and rear and a ride that stays markedly on the supple side of firm, here is a car you could travel a long way in and look forward to the drive home too.

While everyone on board is enjoying the car's seven league legs there is time to take in a cabin so crisply and elegantly styled it could be a Swedish show home and several kilometres from the unrelenting blackness of a typical competitor from Germany.

The Volvo's driver will enjoy a driving environment equally as thought out, with wonderfully clear instruments and a huge touchscreen for the satellite navigation and heating and sound system that's almost as usable as your lap top at home.

You might still yearn for a well turned metal knob to adjust the heating or change radio stations but the S90 is as workable an alternative as you'll find and looks cool as it does it.

The S90 starts at £33,865 and tops out with a hybrid petrol/electric all wheel drive model for £57,705. All the others are powered by a 2.0 litre diesel with either 190 or 235 horsepower, the latter cars fitted with an all-wheel drive system.

Buy the least expensive S90, or for £2,000 more the V90 estate version, and you will have a car that lacks for little. From smooth auto gearbox and powered boot lid to sat nav (with lifetime annual map updates) and adaptive cruise control, it has the essentials and more.

The 'more' includes a suite of safety features – it's a Volvo, remember – that includes pilot assist that's most of the way to driving the car itself. With a hand resting lightly on the steering wheel the car tracks its own path and keeps a safe distance from the vehicle in front, so long as there are clear white lines to keep between. Great in a queue, especially.

Even with the lesser of the diesels doing the work the car never felt slow and on the right sort of smooth road surface turned so quiet you could hear the whispered (female) conversation in the back.

It kept one of its best secrets to last; after more than 700 miles the trip computer showed 56mpg average. Our Golf driving tearaway could only dream of that.

Great training!

I love the variety of activities

I get to make a real positive difference!

Opportunities to join a large employer with a growing workforce:

CHILD SUPPORT WORKERS

Salary: £16,274 - £17,682 per annum (£8.34 - £9.06 per hour plus weekend enhancements, overtime opportunities)
 Full time, part time and casual contracts available

At our Centre near Much Hadham, our team of over 600 staff provide high quality specialist residential care and support to people of all ages with epilepsy, complex neurological conditions and associated learning and other disabilities.

This is a rewarding role supporting the children and teenagers using our services to develop into independent, happy, young adults. You will assist them with their day to day routines, for example helping them get ready for school and to take part in a variety of activities and hobbies. There will be some personal care involved.

Compassion, empathy and respect in your approach to caring for others are essential qualities. Previous experience in care is not essential as we offer support to develop into the role as well as excellent formal training. Shifts include early and late, and some weekends.

Like... learning the terrible truth about a man you loved.

Like... discovering your child has been abused.

Like... realising you were living a lie.

The shocking true story that every wife and mother should read...

Victorious Harlow earn their first win

Maiden home league game sees Romford beaten

HARLOW bounced back in the best way possible following their opening day defeat at the hands of Wanstead, by overcoming Romford in their first home game of the London Two North East season at Lattin Park.

The hosts took the game to Romford in the first 15 minutes with some powerful scrummaging keeping the visitors pinned back in their own 22.

However, for all their possession, Harlow failed to get any points on the board.

Romford's first attack resulted in the unlucky Alfie Clark being sin-binned for a first offence, with the penalty slotted through the posts.

Quickly

Despite being a man down, Harlow replied almost immediately, with a penalty kicked by Danny Smith.

From a line-out Harlow then quickly got the ball across the back line, with new full-back Mathew Dodds breaking through to go over the whitewash. With Smith adding the extra, Harlow led 8-3.

Just after the half hour mark, Dodds embarked on a dancing run through Romford's back line, sucking in their defence and then off loading a simple pass to Charlie Woodington to score.

Smith was again successful with the conversion, stretching Harlow's advantage to 15-3.

Romford were to have the final say of the first half, however, as in injury time, after attacking Harlow's line, they went over the whitewash for their first try.

The conversion was missed making it 15-8 at the break.

Harlow needed the first score in the second half to stamp their authority on the game.

This duly arrived four minutes after the restart following some neat play from winger Scott Whitby, who made a break and offloaded to Dodds.

He kicked through Romford's back line and picked up the ball to speed to score his second try.

Smith made no mistake with the conversion and Harlow were in the driving seat at 22-8.

Harlow's fourth try came following a dicey quick line out ball from the backs which released Whitby, who raced across the Romford line. Once again Smith's trusty boot added two points to give Harlow a 29-8 lead.

But just when Harlow thought they had done enough to for victory, Romford came battling back with a converted try to give them a glimmer of hope.

With ten minutes to go the hosts finally made the game safe as Romford infringed twice allowing Smith to add two penalties and make the final score 35-15.

Harlow: Stalley; Bowering; Christy; Rodell; Seeley; Roberts; Clark; Claridge; Clark; Smith; McGlone; Ross Stalley; Tarsey; Whitby; Dodds. Replacements: Palmer; Stalley; Woodington.

Fagg's strike puts ten man Hawks through in FA Cup

TEN man Harlow Town earned themselves a third qualifying round FA Cup tie at East Thurrock United after overcoming Lowestoft Town 1-0.

Nigel Neita's 31st minute red card put the Hawks up against it for the majority of the match, and although the hosts enjoyed periods of possession, they were unable to convert it into a goal as Harlow dug deep and were excellent to a man.

Tommie Fagg's goal in the 62nd minute was enough to settle the tie, and although Lowestoft went close late on, a red card for Travis Cole meant that both of the teams finished with a man short.

An early chance saw Craig Pope's long range effort saved by Lowestoft keeper Ben Dudzinski. On 32 minutes a late tackle from Hawks Neita on Callum White was punished by a straight red from the referee.

Undeterred by the numerical disadvantage the Hawks still pressed forward. Jared Small put a shot wide of the post, before Alex Read saw an effort saved by Dudzinski.

The second half began much as the first had, with Lowestoft dictating play. Jake Reed put an effort wide as the hosts looked to make their extra man count.

Lowestoft had another great chance to go ahead when Cole's header was heading in the net until Ben McNamara got his fingertips to it to push it over from under the crossbar.

With just over an hour played the Hawks took the lead when Fagg fired home from 20 yards with a delightful curling shot.

With time ticking down the hosts were making their extra man count.

Harvey Hodd should have done better when one-on-one with the goalkeeper, but McNamara was equal to the shot.

Rory McAuley then headed over the bar, before McNamara saved from Ross Jarvis to keep the hosts at bay.

As the game headed into stoppage time, Cole also saw red after a foul on McNamara, and the Hawks held on for victory.

■ ON TUESDAY night Harlow exited the Velocity Trophy, losing 4-3 on penalties at home to Bury Town.

Reece Dobson gave Hawks the lead on 40 minutes, but with the referee about to blow the final whistle Charlie Dickens put the ball in his own net.
